Summary:

Under grace, prayer is no longer a religious chore but an ongoing, faith-filled dialogue with our Father. This grounds us in the reality that He has already provided everything we need in Christ. Instead of trying to persuade God to act, we rely on what Jesus has completed and approach Him from our position of unity and right-standing; this, allows His Word to reshape our thinking rather than attempting to earn His response. We start each day by acknowledging who we are in Him, His children, fully accepted and spiritually equipped, and that awareness directs the way we pray and live. Yielding to the Holy Spirit includes praying in tongues, which strengthens our inner man so that we can learn to trust His perfect intercession where our understanding falls short. When difficulties surface, we answer them from a posture of peace instead of fear. When all is said and done, we can be thankful, secure, and confident that we stand free from condemnation and relate to God as sons who receive, not servants who strive.

Notes:

1. Prayer has moved from being a cumbersome requirement to having a conversation with God.
2. To be blessed isn't about accumulating physical wealth but about empowerment to have success in everything we do. We've already been blessed.
3. Grace-based prayer is rooted in our identity, our union with God, our response to His faithfulness, and from a place of rest, not striving.
4. We implement grace-based prayer by starting our day with identity, not request; using Scripture in prayer to align our mind with the finished works of Jesus Christ, praying in the Spirit to stay rooted in grace's reality, responding instead of reacting; and ending the day with gratitude, not guilt.
5. In grace-based prayer, we pray from victory, not for victory.
