Summary:
Grace-based success isn't defined by material wealth or external achievements but by wholeness, identity in Christ, and alignment with God's purpose. True prosperity means nothing missing and nothing broken in every area of life: spirit, soul, and body. Success flows from knowing who you are in Christ and allowing that identity to guide your purpose, rather than chasing validation or worldly definitions. God has already authored a unique assignment for each person, and discovering it requires a relationship with Him, not performance. Purpose is not what you do but what flows from who you are in Christ. Fruitfulness and transformation into Christ's image are natural outcomes of abiding in Him. Living from rest, not striving, and allowing Christ to be formed in you is the essence of grace-based success.

Notes:

1. Success isn't measured by money, fame, or possessions. Biblical success is defined as wholeness, with nothing missing, nothing broken.
2. Prosperity isn't about accumulation but about being whole in every area: health, peace, relationships, purpose, and identity.
3. Identity precedes purpose: when you know who you are, you stop chasing purpose and start living it. Satan attacks identity to prevent believers from discovering their purpose.
4. Success is doing the will of God from a place of rest, not striving. Resting in God's provision allows us to live generously and confidently.
5. Transformation into Christ's image is the most powerful form of success. Emotional maturity, grace-based relationships, and Spirit-led living are signs of Christ being formed in us.
